

Open Scholarship and the Need for Collective Action

The book aims to “build a common understanding of the complex system of scholarly production” and explains about the various actors in this system including researchers, publishers, libraries, scholarly societies, funding agencies etc, and how they interact.

Top takeaways:

- An explanation of the landscape of scholarly production and understanding the different interests of key players/institutions
- How the move to ‘Open scholarship’ will affect this landscape
- How examples of Open Scholarship initiatives from a range of disciplines have influenced the landscape.

Tom Hostler, Manchester Metropolitan University